"I like how multidisciplinary the programme is. It draws from traditional studies in anthropology and ethnography, but with a more contemporary approach to problem solving and critical thinking that borrows from a lot of disciplines. This programme gives you a great opportunity for academic, as well a personal, growth."

Renee Gonzalez, from USA.
Programme overview
Applied cultural analysis is a multi-disciplinary field of work and study that is heavily influenced by cultural theoretical perspectives and ethnographic methods coming from disciplines of study such as anthropology, ethnology and public folklore. It emphasises the teaching and implementation of strategies of collaborative engagement between university-trained scholars, and actors beyond the university system. The programme aims to develop and deepen students’ knowledge and skills within the field of applied cultural analysis. It emphasises the use of ethnography and cultural analysis as a means of helping organisations and businesses as well as municipal and community-based actors to develop their services, products and public outreach programmes. It does this while simultaneously working to enable those actors to find solutions to problems they may face as an aspect of their daily activities.

The programme will strengthen students’ theoretical and methodological skills in anthropology-based ethnography while developing advanced understanding of different organisational contexts, as well as the demands these place on project management, communications and product development. Via work placement, field projects and the Master's thesis, you will be able to develop and target your skills to the specialised field in which you wish to work after completing your studies. The programme works in close cooperation with a number of clients from both the public and private sectors and NGOs.

Special features of the programme
• The programme is run in cooperation with the University of Copenhagen
• Lectures are held at both universities in the first year
• Students undertake work placements during the third semester
• Professors teaching on the programme specialise in the study of the cultural economy, tourism, cultural heritage, consumer culture, digital culture, food, etc.

Career prospects
As an applied cultural analyst with the ability to help businesses develop their products and services, you can work in connection with the development of human resources and diversity management, on projects focused on marketing, branding and destination development issues, with NGOs on projects focusing on environmental issues, human rights and community development in public services and much more. During the programme you will collaborate with several external stakeholders and conduct a ten-week work placement.
